Recipe for Evelyn Egg

- * A devilishly good attitude
- * A pep in her step
- * A need to dance
- * A pinch of ~~sass~~
- * A sprinkle of paprika freakies

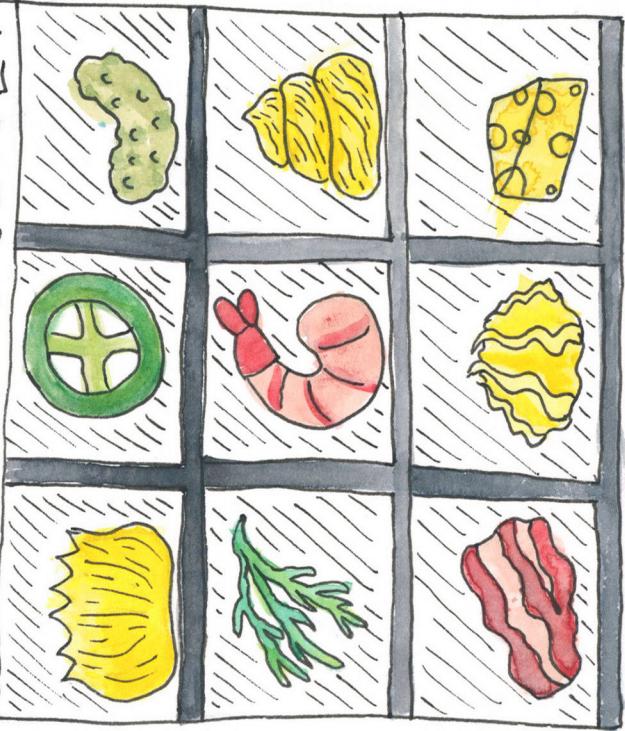

Evelyn Egg is a New York born Cayuga duck egg with dreams of dancing on a big stage. Hailing from a small family-owned farm in Upstate New York, Nature's Coop (NC), Evelyn moved her way over to East Meadow, Long Island. While she currently works as a dancer in the local Stew Leonards, she dreams of moving to the Big Apple where she can show off her Puerto Rican dances, salsa, merengue, and bachata were central at home growing up and she always brings them out at work.

Evelyn is also a fashionable girl. When not dancing, she is curating her hat collection made of different food items. She loves to adorn herself to look as much like a snack as possible. She also works on her DJing skills to pass the time. Recently, she's started teaching classes at a local community center where she can share her Spanish and dance skills. Evelyn is also a dedicated vegan and photographer.

At her young age of 22, Evelyn is learning that "making it" in New York is a lot harder than she thought. Still, she pushes on with hope in her eyes, a wide smile, and a glimmer on her paprika-freckled cheeks. Being away from home has been hard the last two years. Whenever she gets homesick, she looks at her NC tattoo, stamped on her at birth, to remind her of where she came from. Evelyn hopes momi and papi are proud.

2 homes, 2 sick

A collection of stories about and from home, starring friends, family, and the places we've been.

Amidst near crippling home sickness, some of these pieces emerged as ways to feel comfort from the distance between me and the places and people I love. mixed with miscellaneous experiments, Home Sick captures the reconnection to one of my first loves, drawing.
